The Association of Certified Handyman Professionals launches new Website

Maitland, Florida (WiredPRNews.com) – The Association of Certified Handyman Professionals launches new Website.

The Association of Certified Handyman Professionals (ACHP) is a not-for-profit organization of handyman professionals with the general skills and knowledge of our trade. Membership is open to ALL handymen across the country, but Members must take an online verification exam as well as adhere to our code of ethics to qualify to become an ACHP certified handyman. We are based in Maitland, FL.

Our Purpose and Vision is to improve handyman services across the country and connect the public with a certified handyman professional in their area. Our goals are:

• Commitment to excellence in our field
• Professionalism, honesty, and courteous service
• To deliver quality craftsmanship continually satisfying the customer
• To understand the customer and their needs
• To network with other handyman professionals around the country
• Continuously learn and improve our customer relation skills

“Our main goal was to create an easy-to-use Website that everyone can use to access only Certified Handymen, from Soccer Moms to Retirees” states Ed Padilla, Founder & Chairman of ACHP. “With so many people out there to choose from, ACHP is the only place that you can go to find a truly Certified Handyman that has gone through aptitude tests and submitted references to be included within our select group of professionals” adds Padilla.

The new Website, http://www.achpnet.org, provides a place where members can interact, join a local chapter, learn about different tools and techniques, forums and resource networking. Benefits also include a place where the public can readily search a list of certified handyman professionals in their local area by simply inputting their zip code. Customers will know that the handyman they call is legitimate. To qualify, our members must take an online verification exam as well as adhere to our code of ethics to qualify to become an ACHP certified handyman. A passing grade must be achieved in order to become a member.

A Few Good (Handy) Men, You NEED them.
by Greg Dawson on May, 8 2009 10:55 AM – Orlando Sentinel

Readers often ask me, "Greg, can you recommend a good handyman?" And I always say, "No, I really can't." Now I can add, "But I can point you in the right direction."

Ed Padilla, owner of Padilla Home Inspections and Handyman Services, has formed a non-profit organization – the Association of Certified Handyman Professionals – "to try to improve the handyman industry across the country and connect folks looking for a certified handyman in their area," he told me.

For more information about the organization (ACHP), and to find a handyman, go to www.achpnet.org. All handymen (and women) must pass a verification test to become members and be listed on the ACHP site.
The Association of Certified Handyman Professionals wants to wish you and your family a Happy and Safe Holiday season.

Gain more exposure

Although the current economy has taken its toll on most small businesses, handy professionals need to push forward for survival. Advertising is everywhere but what works for the handyman?

There are many ways to advertise and free postings are available on the web, but not many of these postings are taken seriously. Customers understand free ads mean more garbage that they’ll need to sift through to try to find a “handyman in the rough”. I’m not saying these services are bad; most customers are leery of hiring someone to work on their home unless referred by a friend or a member of a reputable organization such as The Association of Certified Handyman Professionals. Whether you’re a customer looking for an honest handyman to install a shelf, or paint the kitchen, or a handyman looking to find quality customers, the Association of Certified Handyman Professionals is just what you’re looking for.

ACHP is all about improving the handyman industry in the United States, by educating and networking with its members and a focus on building stronger customer relationships. You will be better positioned to assist your customers and increase value to your business.

ACHP is a non-profit organization. We are not a franchise.

Safety First!

You’re probably tired of reading “always wear protective eyewear when operating this equipment”. Well me too. It’s such a common warning with the tools we use, we rarely pay it any mind.

It wasn’t too long ago that while using my chop saw a piece of wood sliver just missed my right eye. No big deal right. I was quickly reminded that having my protective specs was probably the best thing to have on. It was later when I realized how severe my injury could’ve been. We take safety for granted. Don’t be foolish and take chances, protect yourself.
